La diffusione della cultura bandistica in Italia a metà Ottocento si presenta come un fenomeno di grande importanza per il vivere musicale della società del tempo. Secondo una statistica del 1872 pubblicata su “Il Trovatore” (giornale letterario, artistico, teatrale milanese) in Italia risultavano censite 1.494 bande e 113 fanfare civili, 78 bande e 40 fanfare militari per un totale di 46.422 suonatori.

È in questo clima di grande fermento musicale che Ponchielli, tra il 1861 e il 1873, in qualità di Capomusica prima della Banda della Guardia Nazionale di Piacenza e dal 1864 della Banda Civica della Guardia Nazionale di Cremona, dà vita ad oltre 200 composizioni originali, adattamenti e trascrizioni di brani di altri autori per le “sue” bande: marce civili e funebri, ballabili (polke, mazurche, scottish e valzer), sinfonie e sinfonie d’opera, fantasie e potpourri. Ponchielli dirige a Piacenza e a Cremona bande medio-piccole: la Banda di Piacenza nel 1861 ha circa 24 esecutori, quella di Cremona, nel 1865, ha 30-34 bandisti.

In particolare, a Cremona, Ponchielli avvia una radicale riforma bandistica: a novembre del 1864 fa indire un concorso pubblico finalizzato a stabilizzare l’organico; riorganizza le diverse sezioni (ottoni melodici a timbro scuro, ottoni squillanti a timbro chiaro, legni); fa istituire una scuola di teoria musicale associata alla banda; nel 1865, inoltre, fa pubblicare un regolamento che definisce gli impegni del complesso bandistico e i doveri del direttore e dei musicisti.

Da un tariffario del Comune di Cremona del 1875 si ricava che gli impegni per i quali poteva essere impiegato il corpo bandistico erano molteplici: servizi in città e fuori città, servizi funebri e religiosi, impegni con il Teatro della Concordia (attuale Teatro Ponchielli) per l’Opera e per il Ballo, veglioni, feste da ballo... e naturalmente i concerti da tenersi in diversi luoghi della città.

La prima versione di questa Sinfonia è per orchestra e risale al 1850; venne composta da Ponchielli quando aveva solo quindici anni ed era allievo del Conservatorio di Milano dove fu eseguita al saggio di fine anno il 27 agosto 1850. Ne esiste anche una versione per pianoforte a quattro mani, pubblicata nel 1854 da Francesco Lucca (il primo editore di Ponchielli) e dedicata al sacerdote di Paderno Fasolaro (oggi Paderno Ponchielli) Don Cesare Paloschi, suo primo insegnante di musica. L’adattamento per banda, anteriore al 1867, è stato curato dallo stesso Ponchielli.

La Sinfonia op. 106 segue il modello delle sinfonie d’opera: ad una breve sezione introduttiva (“Andante un poco mosso”) segue un “Allegro Vivo”. Il brano si apre con un’esplosione sonora sulla dominante di fa minore eseguita all’unisono dall’intera banda per due volte; segue un motivo che dal pianissimo, in crescendo, chiude sul fortissimo. Successivamente un tremolo/bordone sostiene una linea melodica discendente eseguita dai clarinetti; rapidi arpeggi discendenti in ritmo anapestico anticipano l’incipit del tema iniziale dell’Allegro Vivo.

L’Allegro Vivo è organizzato in due macro sezioni (A – A1) che contengono diversi episodi caratterizzati da idee tematiche differenti e spesso tenuti assieme dall’incipit del primo tema. Gli episodi delle due sezioni sono organizzati a loro volta in due blocchi: il primo è sostanzialmente uguale in entrambe le sezioni (A ha un frammento in più che richiama il tema iniziale); il secondo blocco è uguale al primo nella successione degli spunti tematici, diverso per la tonalità (in A1 è tutto in modo maggiore). Nel secondo blocco si ha un richiamo evidente al classico crescendo rossiniano; gli episodi conclusivi sia dei blocchi che delle sezioni accennano a sviluppi tematici dell’incipit del tema principale.

The spread of band culture in Italy in the mid-nineteenth century is presented as a phenomenon of great importance to the musical life of the society of the time. According to an 1872 statistic published in Il Trovatore (a Milanese literary, artistic, and theatrical newspaper), 1,494 bands and 113 civilian fanfares, 78 bands and 40 military fanfares with a total of 46,422 players were registered in Italy.

It was in this climate of great musical turmoil that Ponchielli, between 1861 and 1873, as Chief Musician first of the National Guard Band of Piacenza and from 1864 of the Civic Band of the National Guard of Cremona, gave birth to more than 200 original compositions, adaptations and transcriptions of pieces by other composers for "his" bands: civil and funeral marches, dances (polkas, mazurkas, scottish and waltzes), symphonies and opera symphonies, fantasies and potpourri. Ponchielli directed medium-to-small bands in Piacenza and Cremona: the Piacenza band in 1861 had about 24 musicians; the Cremona band, in 1865, had 30-34 band members.

Particularly in Cremona, Ponchielli initiated a radical band reform: in November, 1864 he had a public competition held with the aim of stabilizing the ensemble; he reorganized the different sections (dark-toned melodic brass, light-toned ringing brass, woodwinds); he had a school of music theory associated with the band established; and in 1865 he had regulations published defining the commitments of the band ensemble and the duties of the conductor and musicians. An 1875 Cremona City Council price list shows that the engagements for which the band corps could be employed were many: services in and outside the city, funeral and religious services, engagements with the Teatro della Concordia (today's Teatro Ponchielli) for Opera and Ball, revivals, dance parties... and, of course, concerts to be held in various places in the city.

The first version of this Sinfonia is for orchestra and is dated 1850; it was composed by Ponchielli when he was only fifteen years old and a student at the Milan Conservatory where it was performed at the end-of-year recital on August 27, 1850. A version for piano for four hands also exists, published in 1854 by Francesco Lucca (Ponchielli's first publisher) and dedicated to Paderno Fasolaro (now Paderno Ponchielli) priest Don Cesare Paloschi, his first music teacher.

The adaptation for band, which dates from before 1867, was edited by Ponchielli himself.

The Sinfonia op. 106 follows the model of opera symphonies: a short introductory section ("Andante un poco mosso") is followed by an "Allegro Vivo." The piece opens with a burst of sound on the F minor dominant performed in unison by the entire band twice; this is followed by a motif that from pianissimo, in crescendo, closes on fortissimo. Next a tremolo/bordone sustains a descending melodic line performed by the clarinets; rapid descending arpeggios in an anapestic rhythm anticipate the incipit of the opening theme of the Allegro Vivo.

The Allegro Vivo is organized into two macro sections (A - A1) containing several episodes characterized by different thematic ideas and often held together by the incipit of the first theme. The episodes in the two sections are organized in turn into two blocks: the first is essentially the same in both sections (A has an extra fragment that recalls the opening theme); the second block is the same as the first in the succession of thematic cues, differing in tonality (in A1 it is all in the major mode). In the second block there is an obvious reference to the classic Rossini crescendo; the concluding episodes of both blocks and sections hint at thematic developments of the incipit of the main theme.

Conductor's signature:

Musical score for orchestra, featuring parts for Clarinetto, Flauto, Sib., 2., 3. & 4. Cornetto, Trombone, Tromba, Fagotto, Bombardino, Trombone, Bassi, and Batteria. The score is handwritten in ink on aged paper. The title 'Sinfonia' is at the top, followed by a dynamic marking 'ff'. The parts are listed on the left, and the music consists of multiple staves with various notes and rests. The score shows a complex arrangement with many dynamics and performance instructions. A small circular library stamp from 'LIBRERIA CIVICA DI MILANO' is visible at the bottom center.
